"The ink of the scholar is more sacred than the blood of the martyr."

Prophet Mohammed (saas)

The Arabic script is derived from the Aramaic Nabataean alphabet. The Arabic alphabet is a script of 28 letters including long vowels. Short vowels are indicated by small diagonal strokes above or below letters.

The letters are derived from only 17 distinct forms, distinguished one from another by a dot or dots placed above or below the letter.

Since so much of the Muslim daily activity need the learning of Arabic or the Arabic script, it is logical to teach children basic useful Arabic words related to Islam early in life.
